

Winter Session 2005 – 2009

Prepared March 2009

By

Thomas. F. Kowalik

Director, Continuing Education and Outreach

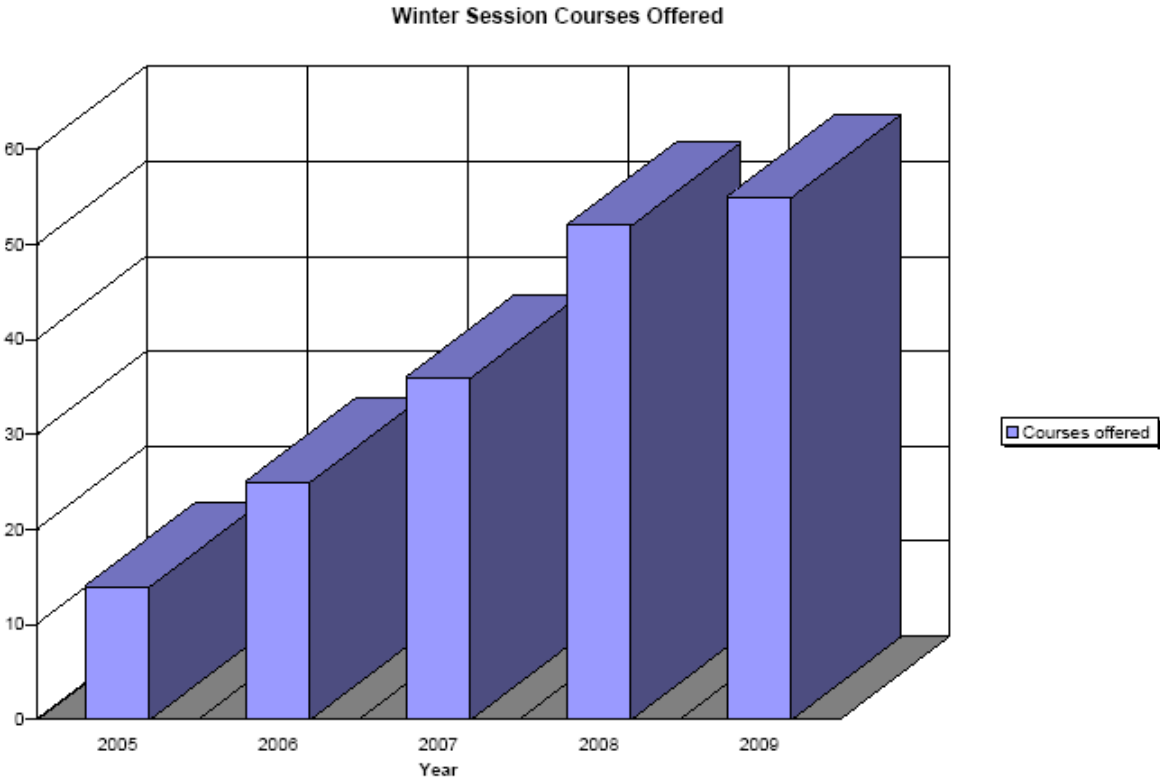

The purpose of this report is to showcase the tremendous performance of Binghamton University's Winter Session. Using four graphs that highlight the number of course offerings, Distance Learning, and enrollment, the history of this program can be told. This University success story is worth sharing with students, faculty, staff, and various stakeholders within New York State. Winter Session meets the educational needs and learning preferences of our students, New York State residents and nonresidents alike. With this report I extend my appreciation to the dedicated professionals who made this Binghamton success story possible.

In 2005 Binghamton University offered its first Winter Session. During that pilot program, a total of 14 classes were offered with an enrollment of 303. Of the 14 classes, four were offered through Distance Learning. Due to immense popularity among students, Winter Session has grown to a vibrant and important element in the University's academic year. In 2009, 55 classes were offered, 39 through Distance Learning, with an enrollment of 1,025. Enrollment in Distance Learning classes was 807.

In 2007 and 2009 student and faculty evaluations were conducted to assess impressions of quality and satisfaction with the teaching and learning environment available through Winter Session. Evaluations were strong and suggestions for improvement were acted upon to further strengthen the quality, programming, and services provided.

Reports showing both student and faculty assessments of their Winter Session experience can be found at <http://winter.binghamton.edu> .

Winter Session History – Course Offerings

Winter Session History – Enrollment and Credit Hours

Winter Session Performance Chart

Winter Session History – Courses Offered Through Distance Learning

Winter Session History – Courses

